

The Cuisine at Red Hot Chilli Pepper has been carefully culled from Chinese gastronomy. Reason why you will find only Szechwan and Cantonese fare on this menu. This choice, as you will observe, is not without reason.

The Szechwan school of cooking is of the more spicy variety. It advocates that chilli peppers stimulate the taste buds, which once wakened, enable the connoisseur to fully appreciate the range of tastes and after tastes.

On the other hand, the Cantonese style of cooking is based on the 'Stir Fry' or 'Wok' method. If the chefs of Canton are to be believed, this style is the harmonious blending of different flavours. Evidently, there is some truth in this belief because the aroma that emanates from the wok is nothing short of divine.

Combine the two and you have a treat for the gourmet. The only difficult part is choosing what to eat!
